

Benedikt Eckhardt presenting "After Empire: A Brief Age of Experiment in the Southern Levant (129-63 BCE)"

Benedikt studied History and German Literature at the University of Bochum in Germany from 2003 to 2008. He then worked at the University of Münster, spending six years doing excellent research in a "Cluster of Excellence". He now teaches ancient history at the University of Edinburgh.

In recent years, Benedikt has worked with epigraphic sources on private associations in the ancient Mediterranean world.

He is currently finishing a book on the history of associations under Rome.
