Title: Grave matters: harnessing the enduring power of prehistoric grave goods

Abstract: Grave goods – the objects interred with inhumation and cremation burials – provide some of the most eye-catching insights into personal identity and the subtleties of prehistoric lives. They glint from our museum shelves, adorn the covers of books and entice us to explore their stories. Although they derive from the ancient past, they also prompt us to think about death and burial in our own lives. Grave goods are powerful and enduring objects.

Location: Laver LT3 and online via MS Teams

Open to all staff and students
