

On behalf of the International Law Forum at Exeter Law School and Department of Politics, we are pleased to invite you to an expert panel on

CAREERS IN INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE AND HUMAN RIGHTS

Professor Michael N. Schmitt (US Naval War College, University of Exeter)
Rogier Bartels (International Criminal Court)
Anna Kirey (Amnesty International)
Glenna MacGregor (ICTY)

Wednesday, 22 March 2017, 15:30 – 17:00 with reception afterwards
Xfi Building, Henderson Lecture Theatre, University of Exeter

International criminal justice and human rights are interdisciplinary fields which offer a diverse range of international careers. As a professional in this field you will find the work exciting and highly satisfying whether you choose to go into practice in a private law firm or work for international criminal tribunals. Irrespective of whether you qualify as lawyer or not, you will be able to decide to fight for human rights with an international organisation or as civil servant for the government. Whatever you do, it will not be a regular job but one that comes with long hours, lots of dedication but will result in changing people's lives worldwide.

To find out more on how to get into these jobs and how to succeed, join us to hear from our highly qualified and experienced panel.

No advance booking is necessary. For further information, please contact Agnieszka Jachec-Neale and John Heathershaw. For more news and updates from the international law team at Exeter Law School, please follow us on @Exeter\_ILF

